control of the railroads and the control of the banking system in the hands of Federal commissioners," he said. "Only a short time ago we were forced to name on the Interstate Commerce Commission a man whose views, if they were followed in the fixing of rates, would impose a burden of millions upon the people of the country. The members of the banking board have been named, and they believe in a central bank, and are connected directly with the great business interests of the country. When all of these are centralized, and a board is vested with the wide discretion given by the bill, there will be only one fight in politics—to control these commissions."

Senator Lewis said that the conditions which brought about the organization of trusts had forced the pending bill.

"I would not subscribe to Federal regulations," he said, "were I not forced to it by conditions which necessitate some guardianship for the citizens against monopoly, and some
